WHAT IS AQUAPONICS?

Aquaponics is the combination of aquaculture and hydroponics. The water from the fish tank circulates through the grow beds, which are filled with expanded clay. Nitrifying bacteria converts fish waste into available plant nutrients. The water is then filtered by the medium (or mechanical filter if attached), returning by gravity or pump back to the fish tank, giving the fish clean water to live in.

RENEFITS OF AQUAPONICS

- Reduced water use. Only about 10% of the water required for traditional gardening or aquaculture;
- Reduced or only soft/natural chemical use;
- Little or no pests when set up in a controlled environment;
- No back breaking digging in messy, dirty soil;
- No soil borne diseases and virtually no weeds;
- Can produce fish and plants all year round.
